New Website Accounts and Communications Preferences for GDPR Compliance

Audience: All

Last month, the new IAA website was launched. As IAA volunteers, you would have received a communication asking to update your website account password and to confirm your email communication preferences to conform with GDPR rules. Unfortunately, a very small number of our volunteers have done so. We understand some emails were flagged as junk. In order to avoid losing access to IAA email communications in the future, please update your profile immediately.

What can you do?

1. Check for a noreply@actuaries.org email in your junk or spam box.
2. If you have not received the email, or cannot find it anymore, please contact IAA IT Web Services at webservices@actuaries.org for assistance.
3. Please note that your login for the old website does not work anymore, your personal email address is now your login username.

Once you have successfully logged into your new account, select the "Communication Preferences" tab under your profile. Instructions for updating these preferences can be found here. You must opt-in to receive IAA communications then SAVE. Afterwards, you may tailor your communication preferences if you wish to receive specific communication types.
